Bye...

Chapter 4 by SaintSayaka

boom

This story is awful. and I'm sure no matter how well written a response is. you people will just vote for utter, mediocre crap.

Chapter 5 by SaintSayaka

Wait, my embittered rant won?

I'd like to thank the academy, my mom...

Chapter 6 by SaintSayaka

Well, it looks like the people have spoken.

Let this be a lesson to all ye young Story Wars writers - spend, like, ten seconds actually reviewing your work. Remember that Joakim is generously paying for service space out of his own pocket. Make it count.

Just because you get a lot of drafts for your story doesn't make it good.

Chapter 7 by SaintSayaka

So, genuine question. What was the "story" here to begin with, before I accidentally ruined it (not that there was very much to ruin, budum tish)? Was there something I was actually supposed to pick up on and run with?

I'm not trying to be rude here, I'm really wondering. Was there something that I could have done...different?

Why am I asking if I'll never get an answer? Well, some might say that it's because I want the attention. And to that, I say - well, it's you who keep voting for me. I'm just submitting the drafts, my friends. Nothing more, nothing less. I think that it's kind of funny that I keep winning, honestly. Plus, with a point score of over 400, it's safe to say that I'm getting that little fill elsewhere.

But let me turn over a kinder, newer leaf. Since I was kind of unfair in my first draft - to be honest, I didn't think it would win, and that's the truth - let me explain my thought process on stories like this, and what lead me to post something so incredibly bitter.

It's not that I'm some old fuddy duddy who hates fun guys. This isn't school. I don't expect every story on here to have perfect grammar (I don't) or be some long, winding epic. I'm all for creative freedom, but I do expect a bit of effort. This story had a ton of drafts so quickly I lost track of them. I'm not rewarding mediocrity while better, more thought out drafts go untouched. Not to mention that, as I said before, Joakim has to pay for this garbage. And no, you can't change my mind on that. My opinion stands firm. This story, no matter how you want to look at it, started off as trash, plain and simple. I'm not saying that I'm somehow making it better by writing all of this up (contrary to popular belief, my ego isn't that inflated), but at least now it's serving some sort of purpose, whether philosophical or comedic.

What exactly was it doing before?

Take this, if nothing else, away from my words here: YOU HAVE TO TRY. Would it kill you guys to spend a little time actually exercising some creativity on a site literally based around just that? I mean, let's look at our original draft again.

hello, i awesome but nobody cares you know what i dont care

Okay, so let's think of some context for this. What type of character would have this type of attitude? A bad girl with no time for losers? A bullied boy who has completely lost his touch with the world around him? An ogre who really, really wants to be a hero but keeps getting hunted down by eager "good guys" for the slaughter? You could go so far with this, and yet, here is this crap, one sentence draft. I get that not everyone can be a great writer, or wants to even get there (but if you're the latter case, honestly, why are you even here?). But for God's sake, effort goes a long way in lieu of skill and talent.

I guess what I'm saying is this: Please, try harder on your drafts. I'm asking you not as a jerk, but as a fellow user. Make this site - and yourself - better.

Chapter 8 by the smiling man

Well this story sucks.
